

Seclude Taradale is a beautiful 7 hour drive from Delhi, and lies in the sleepy hamlet of Ramgarh in the north-eastern part of the Kumaon region of the Himalayas. This relatively undiscovered but increasingly popular destination is often termed as the fruit basket of the picturesque Uttarakhand state because of its sprawling peach, plum, apricot, apple & pear orchards. The beauty of Ramgarh and its surrounding majestic mountains, pristine Oak & Rhododendron forests, crisp cool air and vast clear skies attracted several industrial & royal houses to set up their estates here in the last century. The peace & tranquillity of this place inspired the likes of Rabindranath Tagore who penned parts of his famous Gitanjali here. Mahadevi Verma the prose & poetry writer built an abode here which is now a museum. Narain Swami & Sri Aurobindo also founded Ashrams in the vicinity. The famous wildlife conservationist and writer Jim Corbett stayed here while en-route to bag one of the man-eating Tigers and has mentioned Ramgarh in one of his books.

Taradale Cottage was christened after the illustrious Aristocrat & Diplomat Major General 'Tara' Singh Bal, and belongs to his second generation descendants. The quaint Cottage is situated in a fairly secluded spot overlooking tree covered slopes and a verdant green valley or "Dale" from which it derives the latter half of its name.

Seclude Taradale is a small "home away from home" property, set amidst a secluded natural environment and provides an old world charm & architecture. Our philosophy is to offer a unique warm, intimate and informal homely ambience, without compromising on comfort, service, hygiene & food quality, whilst employing local talent and endeavouring to be a green & sustainable hotel. We are not a generic star hotel. Our location is off the road and is accessible by a brief walk, which adds to the serenity of our property.

ROSEFINCH

This is a ground floor room that allows you to step out into the common courtyard verandah. Its extra high ceilings and "roshandaans" transport you back into the time of "burra saabs" and their aesthetic sense. Order a cuppa cha with tea cake in the evening and it will be served to you with its very special teacosy.

PARAKEET

The room with the most light in the house, has a niche sitting area where the sun streams in effortlessly in the morning. There are multiple windows in the room, each looking out at a different view. The sound of birdsongs, the rustling of the tree leaves, the waking up of the butterflies is the sound scape for this room during the entire day.

MAGPIE

An ancient four poster bed greets you as soon as you enter and all you would want to do is crawl into the soft big white comforting duvet. The bay window area has an interesting wooden rafter roof with a hanging light right in the middle casting deep shadows at night. This is the room for sleepyheads.

MYNA

This is a twin bedded room for people who don't want to fight for the same "rajai" As you lie in bed and stare at the old wooden rafters, we suggest you get lost in counting your blessings at least once in the day. Let the room be grateful for your presence.

SUNBIRD

The quintessential Attic Room. You are on top of the world looking down on creation and that's the only explanation you can find. See the sky change its colour palette to suit your mood, see the leaves of the tree outside the window sway to the dance of the flowing wind. Just see and breathe.

CUCKOO - A DUPLEX SUITE

A mountain house has to have a family room. The one where the kids sleep in the attic part of the room and jump around while the parents shout at them from below. The room has a wood burning fireplace by the bed which warms the entire suite with its coziness. A small bay window seating allows curl up and read moments while you look out at the clouds caressing the mountains.
