THE COTTAGE

Bantony Cottage was built by the royal family of Sirmur as a natural retreat near their 17th-century palace — a jungle lodge hidden in a private pine forest above Nahan. Today it is a nine-room Seclude haven where old-world charm meets modern comfort: rooms adorned with warm hues, antiques and art, a library of classic authors, and lush gardens framing mountain vistas.

A heritage home given a second life as a boutique retreat.

Garden-facing, with stone-wall warmth and wide windows — and its own private patio to sit out in the sun.

COMMON SPACES

A café of authors & games.

The heart of the cottage is its common room — walled with charcoal sketches of writers and shelves of books — opening to a lounge and an entertainment hall with games, a projector and cinematic nights.

i. The lounge

Deep leather sofas and old-world reading corners — the shared heart of the house.

ii. Games & chess

Board games, chess and quiet evenings around the table.

iii. Entertainment hall

Table tennis, a projector and cinematic movie nights under one roof.

iv. The reading room

Lithographs, cigarette cards from the 1800s and a wall of classic authors.
